Musical highlight in St. Peter-Ording: Urban Nature Sounds is back

Sankt Peter Ording, 30.01.2024 - Urban Nature Sounds are back with the first highlights of 2024! LINA MALY, supported by WIM, will give an exclusive concert at Drifters Hang Out on 24 February and Maxim will perform with David Beta in the hotel bar of the Urban Nature Hotel on 16 March. Consisting of a main act, support act and after-show party, the hotel brings well-known artists to the coast of St. Peter-Ording several times a year and delights its guests with a great musical evening programme. Further highlights are already planned for the year.

At the young age of 25, singer LINA MALY is already an integral part of the German-speaking music scene. With her latest albums, the singer and songwriter has sharpened her profile, reflecting her artistic diversity as well as her personal openness and joy of playing.

Anyone who knows the indie pop artist WIM from Hamburg from her supporting programme with Alin Coen or LINA MALY already knows how her songs captivate concertgoers: the catchy melodies, which show lightness and fragility, combined with humorous announcements and poetic sentences, create an intimate atmosphere for a touching evening. The concert on 24 February will be framed by DJ Oonops, who will spin the records from 10.30 pm and get the dance floor of the Drifter Hang Out going.

In March, MAXIM enchants listeners with his emotional songs: captivating, clever images that transport the soul. Time and again, the Siegburg native strives to merge music and words into a perfect composition. He celebrated his breakthrough in 2013 with his Top 10 album "Staub". "Meine Soldaten" became a hit and was honoured with a gold record.

David Beta sings, raps or performs in flowing chants. In his songs, the cheerful man from Kiel combines his Nordic origins, catchy lyrics and musical influences from the pop and hip hop scene to create his very own creative mix.

The two singers will perform together on 16 March from 8 pm in the Drifters Hang Out Bar at the Urban Nature Hotel. From 10.30 pm, DJ Adrian Skibowski will take over the stage and turn the night into day with electronic beats.
